"perspective." the way things look from wherever an individual happens to be. many different people equal as many different perspectives. this is a key to the experiences here at fairfax high school and a balance wheel for living in the changing world around us.

the four hundred and fifteen students of the senior class have a unique perspective on fhs and its traditions. when they leave, the view of those who remain will be of a vibrant, shiny, modern building. gone will be the memory of the old school and its associations. the class of '75 will take with it many of the customs of the past.

many more traditions were changed this year, just as many traditions were changed in the past. the junior girls beat the senior girls in the annual powderpuff game. seniors lost many of their privileges. snoball was demoted from a formal dance to a semi-formal one. the "rebel" name and its significance was a topic of heated discussion. are people rebelling against tradition? some think tradition hinders progress and discourages new ideas. others feel that a new building should bring new experiences. each person has his own feelings about tradition and what it means — his own perspective.

$$\frac{185}{365} = \frac{(5x37)}{\sqrt{25x5329}} \times \frac{.20}{1/5} = 1x\frac{37}{73} = .50689315$$ students attend school 185 days out of a 365 day year. why do students attend? many come here to broaden and develop their minds and educations, but some students come only because they are "made to." school is "a drag" to the latter group, while to the ambitious student, it can be interesting and challenging.

teachers have their perspectives, too. they spend time and effort teaching and helping students. some really don't care about the students; teaching school is only a job, which in turn is money. but, teachers who have a purpose in teaching believe in their students. they take the time to care, to help, and to share knowledge with the willing student.

besides the reasons for being here there are many different student perspectives on what can be obtained in school. the fairfax curriculum is intended to provide preparation for the outside world. it can qualify students to take up work in many fields immediately upon graduation. it can adequately prepare students for college and further studies. fhs can fulfill needs in widely varied areas, both academically and socially. throughout their academic careers, those at fhs find new and interesting opportunities, provided they are open to them.

school is in session for six and a half hours five days a week. there are days filled with satisfaction and frustration, triumph and disappointment, vitality and depression, or anticipation and fear. the many feelings of an individual can determine his perspective on his life. the school or just the events of the day.

the boundaries between them can either command respect or forbid it, according to each group's place in the scheme of things. being in a clique gives some a sense of security and some a sense of superiority. but, it may portray dependence, one upon another. not all students are members of cliques, and therefore form groups of their own. cliques, good or bad, depending on perspective; other groups; the student body; the faculty; and the administration — all make up the atmosphere of fhs.

fhs is a dual concept — people and the building that contains them — separate entities, but sometimes almost indistinguishable. do all of the people feel that they are integral parts of a great whole? many are classified, either by themselves or by others, into groups, cliques and stereotypes. cafeteria workers, seniors, jocks, intellectuals, blacks, teachers, the handicapped, custodians, sophomores, whites administrators, band wallies and freaks are all seen as members of groups.

as everyone reads the yearbook, individual opinions will form. these opinions represent perspectives on life, school and feelings about fhs. the contents of this book are arranged according to the traditional perspectives. the reader is encouraged to add his own color and dimension — his own perspective about the events and people of fhs. it will, thereby carry more meaning for him now, and in the future.

fairfax, t.c. williams share thoughts this fall some 23 students from fairfax and t.c. williams high schools exchanged classes in an effort to promote understanding between the two schools. one of the minor differences was expressed by a student from t.c.: "wow it's so flat!", (t.c. has 3 stories.) several students expressed surprise at the strict attendence policy at fairfax and the policy (though not well enforced) that students remain in the building at all times. at t.c. there is a single lunch period and students may leave the grounds to eat. the exchange trip gave students a new perspective and showed that some of the policies thought to be unworkable can be implemented.

disaster ends nixon years; ford takes over without elections much has happened in the last year that has affected our lives. energy and economic disaster have struck and left their marks, and arabs and israelis still plan new ways to get at each other's throats, but nothing has left a more lasting scar on the political scene or the republican party than the break-in and the aftermath of watergate.

even after the dramatic and nerve racking trial of the watergate defendants; john mitchell, h.r. haldeman, john ehrlichman, and robert mardian; and their subsequent conviction the controversy continues.

the resignation of richard nixon and his subsequent pardon have left many questions unanswered. no one seems to fairfax high thespians present:

the thespians tried something new and different this year. for their fall production they presented a chinese comedy, lady precious stream. the cast consisted of about 36 members who spent many long and hard hours working. a lot of the credit must be given to the crews, who helped greatly in putting the play together. their hard work payed off, as the play was a success. sherrill ducharme played the lead as lady precious stream and frank bates, played hsieh ping-kuei, the husband of lady precious stream. to add to the play, fortune cookies were passed among the audience.

winter is finally here. school has been so busy and rushed. all those before christmas exams, and they were all on the same day. the foreign language department held a party to celebrate christmas. snoball came before we knew it and "deck the halls" was the theme. chris west was announced as the queen. a choral concert was held by the choral department and madrigals were kept busy singing for social groups. christmas vacation didn't last long enough and the new year came in with a bang. resolutions were made to do homework and be to class on time, but few were kept. the magazine staff worked feverishly to put out an issue. s.a.t.'s came and students panicked. it snowed and students went wild thinking there might not be school, but there was. but most of all winter brought a time for new beginnings.

midnight at the oasis is this year's spring finally arrived and with it came spring swing, the first dance of the season. spring swing, a pep club gem, was a traditional semi-formal girl ask boy dance. seeing as pep club sponsors the festivity, the court was made up of senior girls belonging to the club. held in the middle of may, the dance was in honor of foreign exchange students. this year, as in years past, spring swing not only meant the coming of spring, but also the ending of another school year.

this year the choral department did a bit of exchange work with fairhill elementary. first they showed the singers from fairhill around the facilities at fairfax and then gave a concert at fairhill. in return, the elementary students gave a concert at fairfax. the exchange was designed to foster the development of future singers for fairfax high school.

festival band concert

on march 9 the fairfax high school band department performed its annual winter concert. performing were the concert, marimba, stage and symphonic bands. mr. matt hynes, director of the band department was the conductor for the performance. fortunately, this year there was no snow, so the concert went on as scheduled (unlike last year when the concert, as well as several other activities, were cancelled due to snow.)

girls' basketball took a step forward this year as it was the first year they have played in the fieldhouse. miss aderton and mrs. joyce coached the teams. the wrestling teams had a good season this year with mr. scott and mr. piddington coaching. many of the wrestlers went on to regionals. the gymnastics team tried to defend their district championship. libby alnutt and mary jane gore were the star gymnasts. varsity basketball had a fine season. although the team did not have height, they made up for it through their determination.

this year fair facts began its first year under the direction of miss amster. the main goal of the paper was to print straight facts and express all pros and cons on major topics. magazine, the school literary magazine, was near to nothing at the beginning of the year, but with a new sponsor, miss lange, and many new staff members, magazine quickly changed.

undertaking a great responsibility, the sampler staff worked diligently to provide f.h.s. with an outstanding yearbook. pressured deadlines and an overworked staff were only a few of the problems faced by the sampler. by working together and rushing to meet deadlines the sampler staff finally produced the 74-75 yearbook.

secretaries backbone of administration

this year as in past years the secretaries were kept very busy. their job does not seem like very much but there are many things the secretaries do that go unnoticed by the students. federal survey forms come out in the fall and once they are turned back in, the secretaries must go through them and put them in alphabetical order. secretaries even order all the supplies for the school, field trips are another thing which must go through the office. the secretaries must type permission slips for the students and also get bus drivers. telephone calls, students checking in and out, are just some of the things secretaries must cope with.

we're finally juniors . . . it seems like only yesterday that we were frosh wandering about the school. now we have so many responsibilities and decisions to make. class rings . . . the prom . . . all those tests . . . will they never end? but we had fun. remember powder puff? we beat the seniors. trying to sell trashcans, and we did it, too. remember those flower-making parties and working on the float? (we stayed up all night and slept thru our classes) next year we'll be seniors, maybe then we can relax (?) the spirit of 76 forever . . .

sophomores, the class that always seems to be stuck in the middle. they're no longer confused freshmen, not yet confident upper-classmen. as sophomores their reponsibilities and problems have grown, along with their ability to cope with and handle these new situations. yesterday's freshmen, today's sophomores, tomorrow's juniors.

winning of first spirit stick

we are the freshmen. we came to this school like all other freshmen before us, confused and bewildered. for us the year was spent adjusting to the system and establishing ourselves in the school. considered the small guys in f.h.s., by the other students, we worked hard to gain their respect. perhaps next year when we're sophomores we'll have more time to devote to studying. this year we just had a good time.

and you can tell
everybody, this is your song. it may be quite simple,
but, now that it's
done, i hope you
don't mind, i hope
you don't mind, that i put down the words.
how wonderful life
is, while you're in the world.

look to this day!
for it is the life,
the very life of life.
yesterday is already
a dream,
and tomorrow is only
a vision;
but today, well-lived,
makes every yesterday
a dream of happiness,
and every tomorrow
a vision of hope.

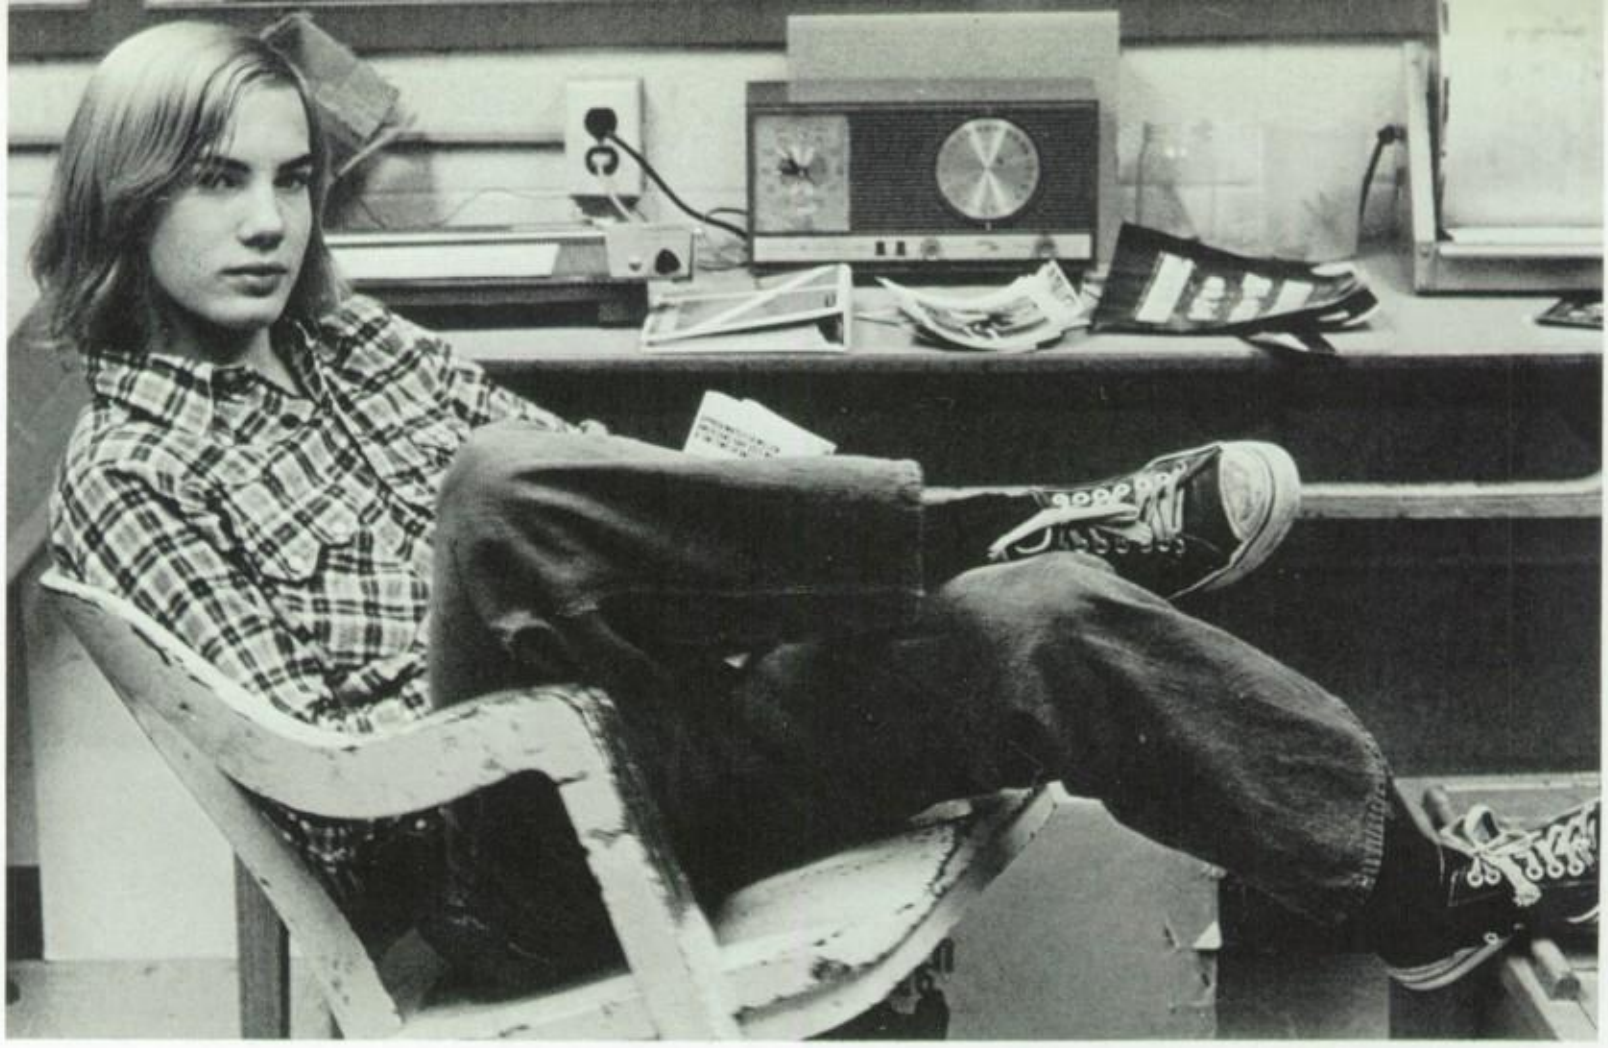
in memoriam



J.L. WILSON

"peace i leave with you, my friends, shalom, my peace, in all you do. peace i leave with you, my friends. i give to you so you can give to others, too."

a vacant place is sorely felt — for a while. the fleeting trace of a face departed is soon obscured by the pressing rush of new faces, new places, and fresh concerns — unless — there is a legacy of thought or sight to keep the image bright. through his photographs we can still see the shy smile and the special gentleness that was robert. he lives with us still.

R. CONN

this year was a challenging one for the sampler staff. only through dedication and hard work were we able to produce the 1975 annual at all. the whole staff, editorial and photographic, worked feverishly to keep up with the ever changing pace of student life. without such a staff this yearbook would never have made it.

special thanks goes to mr. mason, our advisor. without him to help and encourage us we never would have met the pressing deadlines. much appreciation also goes to mr. jim ellis, our representative from hunter publishing company, who, despite the snow, made his way through to help us with our endless detail problems.

thanks also goes to mr. jim hecker and his printing class. they spent class time printing our letterhead for stationery to our satisfaction. special appreciation goes to robert charles studio. they acted as technical assistants in providing us with numerous services. among these were the senior portraits, underclass pictures and free use of equipment and supplies. also many thanks to our advertisers and contributors.

finally, much appreciation goes to the administration, faculty and student body. without their assistance and cooperation the yearbook staff would not have been able to capture the true story of the 1974-75 school year. members of the school community were inconvenienced many times but, grudgingly or willingly, they always cooperated.

thanks to all the wonderful people of fhs and the fairfax community who helped put out the 1975 sampler.

we have passed another year. some of us are relieved. some of us have beautiful memories. no matter what our experiences, they will be engraved in our memories forever, viewed from our own perspective.
